Gritos Del Sur Documentary

Gritos del Sur: Metal, Punk & Hardcore in Latin America explores the intricate and powerful relationship between these musical genres and their role as countercultural movements in the region. With a sharp and insightful lens, the film not only chronicles the evolution of metal, punk, and hardcore across Latin America but also delves deep into the roots of resistance and dissent that have defined these communities for decades.

From the dark days of military dictatorships—where repression and censorship reigned—to today's complex realities marked by violence and inequality, the documentary, directed by Jorge Rivas, highlights how these genres have become powerful voices challenging the status quo and giving expression to the marginalized and oppressed.

Through moving and revealing testimonies, the film takes viewers into the very core of a subculture that transcends geographical and cultural barriers, uniting people from diverse backgrounds in a community bound by music and the fight for justice. From underground scenes in major cities to the most remote corners of the continent, Gritos del Sur shows how music is not only a means of artistic expression but also a catalyst for social change and solidarity.

The documentary features testimonies from legendary bands such as Sepultura, Puya, Muscaria, A.N.I.M.A.L., P.O.D., Ill Niño, Dischord, De La Tierra, Buitres, Black Pantera, Mawiza, among many others.
